

Sandringham Palace Exposed To Airbombs

Dirigibles Cross Channel and Inflict Considerable Damage At Four Different Points, Killing and Wounding Men, Women and Children In Darkness: One Craft Dropped

(Associated Press by Federal Wireless.)

LONDON, January 20.—The long expected German Zeppelin raid upon England took place last night, the results of the aerial bombardments being a number of buildings damaged, one woman and one boy killed, and one man, one woman and one baby injured by the bursting shells.

At least four different places were bombed, and from the various reports received, the raiding air fleet consisted of from three to six Zeppelins, which crossed the channel, separated, made the attacks, and returned in the direction they came from.

ZEPELIN CAPTURED

No official report was given out last night by the war office as to the damage inflicted in the raid, or the success with which it was met; but a Central News report from Hunstanton, which was passed by the censor, states that one of the Zeppelins had been brought down there and captured.

Hunstanton is seven miles north of Sandringham, one of the objects of the aerial attack.

SANDRINGHAM MENACED

The first intimation of the raid came early in the afternoon when an Amsterdam despatch was received stating that at half-past two o'clock, three Zeppelins had passed over the island of Ameland, off the north coast of Holland, flying west.

The Zeppelins bombarded four of the coast towns of Norfolk, including the town of Sandringham, in which is located the residence of King George, Sandringham Palace, the official residence of the Prince of Wales when the holder of that title is old enough to require an establishment of his own.

BOMBS FALL NEAR PALACE

A number of the German bombs were dropped in the near neighborhood of the palace, where the children of the King and Queen of Belgium are supposed to be now living.

The first attack was made at Yarmouth. At this place the bombs fell in Norfolk Square, at the South Quay, the headquarters of the National Reserves; at Trinity Depot, and elsewhere throughout the city, doing considerable damage to property.

MAN AND WOMAN SLAIN

A quick search by the police at the scenes of the explosions resulted in the finding of the bodies of two victims of the raid, a man and a woman. It is reported that at least two more persons were killed.

From Yarmouth the raiders proceeded north along the coast to Cromer, which also was subjected to a bombardment; and then west to Sandringham.

Here an attempt was made to damage the Royal Palace. A number of bombs fell all around the place, but none struck the palace.

BOMB KILLS A BOY

Near Sandringham there was a bombardment of Kings Lynn. Here the raiders killed one boy and injured three other persons, a man, a woman and a baby. Four bombs fell on the Kings Lynn docks, which caught fire. After hovering over the place for fifteen minutes to watch the effects of their work, the Zeppelins then raised along The Wash.

HOUSES BADLY DAMAGED

A number of houses were badly damaged at Kings Lynn, but the citizens took advantage of the warning and sought refuge in their cellars or in the "funk holes" they had prepared, this being the name generally given to the temporary bomb-proofs many had dug for use in such instances as demonstrated their worth last night.

It will go unnamed until various contents throughout the country are decided. The family favors Francis Woodrow for a name.

'SLEUTH' SMITH HAS GOOD STORY

Long-Handed, Outwitted Friends of Man He Wanted and Landed Him In Hilo

(From Wednesday Advertiser.) J. J. Smith, United States marshal, who returned yesterday from Hilo, had quite a thrilling experience in the second city in running down his quarry and in getting his man showed sleuth-like abilities that would put to shame the "best" in the city's detective department.

The marshal slipped out very quietly in the steamer Mauna Kea for Hilo Saturday afternoon and he did so in order to insure success in his enterprise. He had a warrant for a Japanese named Yotaro Morikawa, charged with a statutory offense and he wanted to be sure that when he got to Hilo his man would not have been scared away by news of the marshal's coming.

In company with Officer George Oawa, a Hilo cop and brother of Attorney A. K. Oawa of this city, Smith started on the man hunt. It was hard work, says Smith.

No Sign of Quarry. "We visited every Japanese hotel and residence in the city limits but got no clue of the whereabouts of Morikawa," said the marshal yesterday. "No one seemed to know anything of the man. Oawa and myself impressed an automobile accident down to Waialeale, Hilo's big water front."

"We went through the same performance in Waialeale, with the same results. Finally, we gradually got to the hinterland and after of a couple of days we found a Japanese building and saw a number of Japanese about the premises. Coming to the place, we inquired for the man and after a while some waitress told us that a man of that name had been there but that he had gone down to the wharf."

"I unrolled an old map and put my finger to the forehead and thought, looking at Oawa meanwhile. I saw a trap, in my mind's eye. Then I sent Oawa to the wharf and remained at the house. I made a superficial survey of the landscape and did some more thinking."

"Then, as I was turning around a corner of the house, I met two pretty little Japanese girls, one about ten and the other probably eleven or twelve years of age. I saw a chance and took it. Deep into conversation with the little girls I went. We talked of the weather and other things and gradually I came around to Morikawa. I showed them a photo of Morikawa. Their eyes widened and I saw recognition in them."

"Him bad man, eh?" inquired the smaller of the girls.

"Yes, very bad. Too bad, he cut another man's throat like this," I answered quickly, dramatically illustrating the latest killing with a vigorous drive of my hand across my jugular.

"Too much pikika," chimed in the elder girl, "no good man. I think, maybe, you look inside house upstairs you find something," and the little ones beat it away.

"I saw the point and even without waiting for Oawa's return, I took a ladder, I ran up the stairs and looked around. No one was in sight, but I hung on. Finally, I espied a little cupboard, with a dirty rag of a curtain hanging in front. I imagined the curtain moved. I was quite sure it did. On tiptoe I made noise to the cupboard and with one hand suddenly pulling the curtain aside, the other I made a vigorous lunge and grabbed something. I pulled it out and the thing was a man and the man turned out to be Morikawa."

"To his credit, I must say that he made no fight and submitted to arrest without even a whimper. I got him over there in the corner. Go, take a look at him."

NEW IMMIGRATION DEPOT LOST TO SAN FRANCISCO

WASHINGTON, January 20.—A single objection blocked the house bill to convert the military prison at Alcatraz Island into an immigration station.

The urgent necessity for some action looking to the relief of conditions at the present overcrowded immigration station on Angel Island was explained by Congressman Julius Kahn, who said:

"The war department plans to use the buildings at Fort Point for a military prison if Alcatraz is abandoned. The present immigration station is crowded with Chinese, Japanese and Hindus. Bad as the situation is, it will become rapidly worse with the increase of steam due to the opening of the Panama Canal."

GULCH AVENUE SAWYERS GET OFF WITH FINE

Otto Gertz, Son of Woman Who Owns Cottage, Tells of Previous Games

BIG GANG OF CROOKS ALMOST KILLED HIM

Tom Quinn, Lewis' Stables and Other Angles of Rottenness Now in Limelight

(From Wednesday Advertiser.) A. McDowell, Fred Estes and M. Ross pleaded guilty in the police court yesterday morning to a charge of gambling, wherein Herman Judge was the complaining witness. Judge was fined each of the men seventy-five dollars and two dollars and thirty cents costs, which they unwillingly paid to Assistant Clerk Fred Wood.

Thus ended the first chapter in the sensational expose made by The Advertiser yesterday morning of the gambling ring which has been operating openly and flagrantly in this city for many months.

Kubey, the complaining witness, was arrested for being a participant in the game. His case will be tried today. Sam McMillan, the chauffeur, who is alleged to be the "steerer" in the game, and who was also a participant in the Thursday-night game, in which he lost a $250 diamond ring, is under arrest and will be tried in the police court tomorrow morning.

Crooks Scurry To Cover. Following the expose in The Advertiser there was a general scurry for cover among those who are prominent in underworld and police circles, and Herman Kubey came in for no small measure of denunciation for the part he has taken in bringing the existing gambling conditions here into the limelight.

On the witness stand, yesterday morning, Kubey testified as to the manner in which he was taken to the cottage in Gulch avenue, at which several games were running full blast. He further stated that after these games were closed he was taken with several others to the Lewis stables in King street, where another game was running. Several professional Japanese gamblers were participants in this game. Warrants will be issued today for Oawa and Tanaka, Japanese, who, it is alleged, have grown wealthy by indulging in games of chance about the city. They will be material witnesses in the Lewis stables case, when this place is investigated.

Mrs. Gertz Ignorant. Otto Gertz, son of Mrs. Anna Gertz, owner of the cottage in which Estes and McDowell are alleged to have run a brace game for many months, in a statement to The Advertiser last night declared that his mother had no knowledge of the business which had been carried on in her cottage. The place was rented to a man named Baxter, who was brought to the premises by McMillan, who was later taken away. Several left for the coast giving a month's rent. Mrs. Gertz, it is claimed, served notice on McMillan last Sunday to vacate the premises.

McMillan denies having had anything to do with the rental of the cottage at any time, although young Gertz said last night that prior to the time that Baxter engaged the cottage, McMillan was the lessee for a long period.

Gertz further declared that on the night of December 15 he was invited to the cottage in question. There was a hullabaloo and about twenty persons were present, the majority of whom were soldiers and young men about town. He was given considerable liquor to drink and invited later into a crap game which was in progress. Not having any money with him, he did not participate.

Gertz Badly Beaten. Gertz stated that the game progressed for some time when suddenly an altercation arose over the loss of sixty-five dollars, which mysteriously disappeared from the table. He was set upon by no less than three men and was severely beaten and kicked about the head and body that he was under the doctor's care for several days.

"I succeeded in beating off several of my assailants," said Gertz, "and nearly got away, when I was knocked to the ground by Tom Quinn, who said, 'Let's kill the son of a bitch. I mean to get to my mother's house, finally, and with her assistance was getting the blood and dirt washed off me, when Detective Sergeant John Kellett entered the house. He asked me if I had the sixty-five dollars, over which the dispute started. I told him that I did not have the money. Kellett then made a search of the premises and after satisfying himself that I did not have the money, he left. No arrests of any nature were made, although Kellett said if he could find Joe Loh he would arrest him, as he thought he got the money."

Warrant Secured and Dropped. "I went to the police station the following day and swore to a warrant charging Tom Quinn with assault and battery. By a court about way word was brought to me from Quinn stating that if I pressed the charge I would be killed. I conferred with my mother over this feature of the case and as she lives out there in Kalihi, alone most of the time, I took her advice and had the warrant withdrawn."

Sheffield Ross maintains his claim-like silence in regard to the present case and will admit no knowledge of the conditions as brought up in Monday's and yesterday's disclosures.

It was reported yesterday that Judge Ashford will call particular attention of the grand jury to the existing gambling conditions in this city, when this body meets tomorrow at two o'clock.

Berlin Says Battle Wanes On East Line

Paris Claims Successes in Hard Fighting At La Boisselle and Pont-a-Mousson

Teutons Are Reported To Have Started Terrific Drive Against British At Ypres

(Associated Press by Federal Wireless.) LONDON, January 20.—Advises regarding the fighting in France and Belgium yesterday are fairly contradictory. Berlin reporting no developments and little fighting, while the Paris announcement claims success in the hard fighting at La Boisselle and Pont-a-Mousson, which has been in progress for the past few days.

In spite of the German wireless advice from Holland, say the Germans are making another great attempt to cut their way through in Flanders.

TWO OFFICIAL REPORTS

The official Paris despatch says: "We have captured La Boisselle, which we evacuated on Sunday. North-east of Pont-a-Mousson was stormed another of the enemy's fieldworks. In the forest of Lepretre, we captured 500 yards of trenches."

Berlin reported officially that: "In the western war arena only a few unimportant skirmishes have taken place. Artillery duels are frequent along the entire front. Very unfavorable weather is being experienced along the eastern front."

TERRIFIC DRIVE STARTED

Contradicting the Berlin report, yesterday's despatches from Amsterdam said that the Teutons have started a terrific drive against Ypres in the hope of cutting through the British and Belgian line at that important point. To meet the vigorous new offensive move strong British reinforcements are being rushed to the scene.
